CITY TRUSTEES' ACTION
MEETS WITH FAVOR

The action of the board of trustees at the meeting last Monday night in not granting permits for Saturday night dances to continue until 3 o'clock morning is to be commended by every fair-minded citizen who believes in morality and respectability. The trustees will confine the dances to 1 o'clock which will give all dancers plenty time to enjoy themselves. By starting the dances at 8 o'clock there will be sufficient time to "trip the light fantastic." No good can come of the early Sunday morning dances. Young people who stay out all night and a part of the morning cannot attend to their religious duties on Sunday. The moral effect is bad, it is degrading and has a tendency to draw the young people away from church which is the bulwark of our civilization, the protector of the home and the hope of our young men and women. Take the church away and there will be no civilization, no home and no purity among our young people. Therefore we commend the trustees for their stand on the Saturday night dances.

OTHERS SHOULD BE PUNISHED FOR VIOLATING THE LAW

It is to be regretted that others who are violating the law in the illicit sale of liquor were not punished as well as the proprietor of the Saddle Rock Restaurant. They are just as guilty. It is hardly fair to make flesh out of one and fish of another.

Many believe that A. Baradat should have not been the first to be made an example of in view of the fact that he had only just completed the expenditure of $6000 in equipping one of the most attractive eating places in the county, a place that was patronized by the best citizens of Redwood City. However, be that as it may, if he were guilty of bootlegging, and it is pretty certain that he was, he is deserving of no sympathy from any respectable citizen. The only regret is that the other bootleggers in town who have been flagrantly violating the law for months were not also punished and made to know that the law cannot be violated with impunity. It is said that there are sixteen "blind pigs" in town who are breaking the law every day. It is alleged that they are foreigners who do not speak the language and are not citizens.

TRYING TO CLOG THE WHEELS OF GOVERNMENT

In both branches of Congress democratic leaders are now engaged in engineering filibusters for the purpose of preventing the legislative branch of government from transacting absolutely necessary governmental business.

In both branches of Congress the purpose of this filibustering is to prevent majority rule; to obstruct a majority in the task of legislating. In the House a filibuster cannot long prevent action by a majority, but at a time when every committee has important work in hand demanding every possible moment of time on the part of many members of the House even while sessions of Congress are in progress, it results in halting the work of the committees, and thus adding to the legislative log jam which will leave a great mass of unfinished business when the present Congress adjourns. In the Senate democratic leaders who a few months ago were making all sorts of loud noises because debate on the league of nations issue was being permitted, are now using the filibuster method of preventing a vote on the farmers' tariff bill, and in that way obstructing all other business.

It is appropriate that democratic leadership is making the last days of what may be the last democratic national administration memorable by a policy of mere obstruction. Fortunately it is that the people put such leadership so hopelessly in a minority during the first half of the first Harding administration that its powers even of obstruction will be limited. Otherwise, judging from the present performance, we might expect continuous resort to quibbles and technicalities to prevent Congress from carrying out the policies to which the republican party is pledged.

SCUTTLE THE BOARD, NOT THE SHIPS

It will be a great misfortune if the exposures, charges and denials growing out of the shipping investigation shall result in diminished public interest in the development and permanent maintenance of an adequate American merchant marine. If there has been gross waste, the responsibility should be fixed; if there has been dishonesty, the offense should be exposed and punished; but these are mere incidentals compared with the vital problem of establishing a fleet of merchant ships that shall traverse every sea and carry the American flag into every port.

Out of the disclosures of the shipping investigation one fact seems to stand convincingly demonstrated—that success in the maintenance of a merchant fleet cannot be hoped for through government ownership or operation. Even though the government may have the assistance of able and experienced shipping men—men experienced in ship building or ship operation—yet the limitations and defects of transaction of government business are such that successful competition with privately owned ships is impossible. The red tape in conducting negotiations and concluding agreements the lack of efficiency among subordinate employees, the absence of the stimulus of hope of gain, are handicaps which make it inevitable that the privately owned fleet will be able to operate at the smaller expense and the greater accomplishment of results.

In its earlier efforts, the Shipping Board was unfortunate in having a personnel that could not reach an agreement upon a course to be pursued, and inaction was the outstanding feature of the record. Later there were on the board some men of ability and experience in the handling of large business affairs—men of capacity and recognized integrity. It is unfortunate that the entire membership of the Board, from first to last, was not of that character. Partisan politics played too important a part in the selection of some of the members to permit the appointment of men of training in the handling of large undertakings. This discloses one more apparently insurmountable defect in government operation of any enterprise that can be left to private ownership and management.

Just at present the situation in ocean shipping seems to be a reaction in harmony with the depression into which many other industries have fallen, and the future is as uncertain as the present was a year ago. Because the future is in doubt, and because it is vitally important that America shall maintain a merchant marine to carry the greater portion of her incoming and outgoing commerce, it is highly important that exposure and discussion of past mistakes shall be accompanied by determined effort to succeed in the future.

However great the losses due to war costs and war wastes, dissatisfaction must not diminish interest in the development of a merchant marine that will be in continuous operation, searching out new markets for American goods, paying transportation tolls into the pockets of American investors, and standing always ready to fly to the aid of the American navy in case of war.

Our Double Tax Burden

Already our per capita payment for State government each year, according to the U. S. Census Bureau report (1919) is $11.24
The average per capita payment for State government throughout the United States (1919) is 6.05
The excess per capita cost for every California is 5.19

This is 89 per cent above the average State government cost, and now we are asked to load on our backs an additional $15,000,000.

Who Gets this Money?

We are told that the school teachers will get this money, but this is not true. They are already provided for in the amounts voted by the people at the November elections. We are told this money is for dependent children and bond interest, but this is not true. There sums we have already authorized. We are told that the people must prove that this additional money is not needed, but this is not true.

The burden of proof is on the State office holders who are now asking $15,000,000 of the people's money to spend in the next two years.

These are the facts:

No revenue deficit exists. No ad valorem tax is needed.
Ask your legislator to demand that the State live within its income.

DUCK HUNTING REMINISCENCE

Story No. 31

By Claude Fox.

When a child is born in our midst at the present time there is little attention paid to the new comer, outside of the immediate family into which it has been ushered and a small circle of intimate friends. The attending physician files a certificate of birth and the world moves right along without even a nod to the little stranger, but in the days whereof I am now writing it was quite different insofar as the residents of the village of Redwood City was concerned. The population could be safely estimated at about sixteen hundred souls. Everyone knew each other and such a thing as a directory was entirely unnecessary.

If Mrs. Jones' dog chased Mrs. Casey's geese out on the old commons it was heralded far and wide within a few hours. There were women living at that time who unquestionably put the grand in grandmothers. They could tell you just how Abraham Lincoln, our martyred President, looked when he was a little boy, and how Barbara Fretche had her hair combed when she performed the heroic act which caused to be written:

"Shoot, if you must, this old gray head,
But spare your country's flag, she said."

And when it came to fixing the date of birth of each child in town just which parent they looked like, when their first teeth were cut, when they were weaned and each little incident connected with them all, the man who could add, multiply and subtract all in one breath would have to go a long way back and sit down very hard. The arrival of a baby in those days occasioned more back yard telegraphy than the Western Union Telegraph company handled in a month.

By this time the readers of this article are undoubtedly wondering what all this has to do with duck hunting. But have a little patience. It is only preliminary to what will follow.

Along in March, 1884, if my memory serves me right, it was whispered about the street one morning that mine host, Charley Ayres, of the Tremont House, was the father of a big, bouncing boy. Did the people of this little village sit up and take notice. Well I'll say they did. If you doubt my word just ask P. P. Chamberlain or Dan Mullen.

Now Charley Ayres was one of our most respected old-time citizens. He had married and reared quite a family of children, but the most of them were called home together with the mother about the time the boys and girls had reached man and womanhood. He had arrived at that age in life when trotting your grandchildren on your knee is the usual and customary pastime, but Charley Ayres did nothing of the kind. He started those back yard telegraph wires working by again marrying, a very estimable woman, who is still living, and as a result of that union a baby boy was born, of whom I have spoken, one whom you all know, for you see him on the street every day. Jimmy Ayres is his name, or more properly speaking James Bicknell Ayres, if you please.

The news spread rapidly and Redwood City, or rather the male portion of it, entered into a celebration that lasted for two weeks. If prohibition had been in effect at that time boot-leggers would have run over each other in a wild scramble to fill the orders necessary for the amount of liquor that was consumed on the birth of that boy. The Tremont

House ran a bar in connection with the hotel, Lon Cook's saloon was just adjoining, the old Grand Hotel stood directly across the street, and there was a continuous procession from one place to another. Everybody had to call on the proud father and Charley Ayres did the occasion up in first class style. What he overlooked Lon Cook made up for and it was a gala two weeks for those who participated in the festivities. It is safe to say that never in Redwood City's history, past or present, was the health of a baby toasted more often.

About the time that the celebration was winding up and men were getting back to their normal footing, I received word from James W. Bicknell, Judge Bicknell, as he was usually called, who was then county clerk and recorder, that he desired to see me on a matter of importance. Now Judge Bicknell was one of my best customers in the sale of wild ducks. I had a standing order of a dozen each week for him. Always he wanted the best. It made little difference what kind they were but the birds must be in prime condition. He was a portly old gentleman who lived to satisfy the inner man and his table always groaned under the finest eatables to be had. For years he had made his home, together with his deputy, Harry Thompson, at the Tremont House. In fact he and his deputy believed they had a mortgage for life on the office of county clerk and recorder until Eddie Elkerenkotter made a combination with Johnny Johnston, who was then living at Spanishtown, and the political slate was broken. In those days as the coast went, so went the county. Now it is quite different. Eddie looked out for the vote on this side of the mountain and Johnston swung the coast into line. The result was that Bicknell and Thompson went down to defeat, but that is another story.

When I appeared before the Judge he informed me that the Ayres baby was to be named after him and that he intended to give a wild duck dinner in honor of the event to a small coterie of friends. He therefore wished me to secure for him a dozen fine fat canvasbacks. Nothing else would do. Teal, spoonbill and widgeon would never do to celebrate the christening of that child. I explained to him that canvasbacks were scarce and consequently hard to get, but he said I had plenty of time, as the big event would not occur for a week. I took the contract and fulfilled it, but I never worked harder in my life to fill an order than I did to secure those ducks to be devoured in honor of James Bicknell Ayres.

As it happened then and still does today, the cans do not get in here much until February and March, so I had that much in my favor. There were two creeks where some could always be found, down in First Slough and up in Smith's Creek. As we boys were hunting on foot then we did not visit the latter place much, as it was off our beaten trail. When I confided to Fred Statler the task we had ahead of us he said at once we could not fill it, but when I told him the judge would pay any price for the birds we decided to do our best. It of course became necessary to pass up every other duck. To shoot at teal or widgeon would only scare the big red heads in the sloughs, when they would beat it for the bay. So we worked First Slough for all it was worth from daylight until dark. Fred would take his old dog, Carlo, trail out to the Leaning Stake Creek and from there over to Little Elbow, a bend in First Slough, where he would sit down in the high tufts, and I would start in at the head of the creek and work down to where Fred was. If there were any canvasbacks in the creek at daylight we were bound to get a crack at them, either one or the other. The first two days we did not get a bird. I misjudged the stretches of the creek in which the big fellows were feeding and they got away from us, but the third day we secured five. From then on we did work. I found a small bunch in Bushy Creek and killed two more. The weather was very cold and we had no trouble in keeping the birds after they were properly cleaned. Each morning we were out at the first streaks of day. The dinner was to be held that coming Saturday night. Judge Bicknell sent for me to know how we were progressing. I told him we had seven and would make good. I still, however, had my serious doubts about it. On Friday morning luck certainly was with us. Fred got settled in his usual place and I made a sneak out at Snooney Point. It was low tide and about a dozen cans were in the creek diving for clams. I should have had four, but I was too anxious and consequently nervous, and only got two, but as they led out past Fred he got two more. It was useless to stay, as they would not return until evening. So we went home, got our dinner, rested up and started again.

We had only one more to get, so we felt pretty secure. That evening we changed places. I went out to Little Elbow and Fred did the sneaking. I had no sooner got settled than I heard him shoot and a small bunch came leading out from the head of the creek. They did not swing close to me, so I lost the shot.

MENLO PARK NEWS OF ALL SORTS

In the death of Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Mason, beloved wife of James G. Mason, the family of which she was the idol and the community in which she was the favorite where she had lived so long, have sustained an inestimable loss. In this community no one could be missed so sadly as she; and no one, by so many, could be so deeply mourned. The number who attended the funeral and the numerous floral tributes were strong evidences of the esteem in which she was held by the people of Menlo Park. She was a true Christian. Where grief and sorrow came she was the first to lend her aid to soothe the sufferings of the afflicted. She was unselfish in her labors. When we turn to look on those who much professed but live a life—live for themselves alone, how noble, grand, sublime her true unselfish life appears.

Mrs. Mason passed away suddenly at her home on Oak Grove avenue at 1:30 o'clock Monday morning. She attended the 8 o'clock mass at the Church of the Nativity Sunday morning. She was taken with a fainting spell while there. She went home and apparently had recovered in the afternoon. Two doctors were called and they pronounced her ailment an acute attack of indigestion and considered her case anything but serious. She called to her husband at 1 o'clock Monday morning. She was then passing away. Father Hammond was called and administered the last sacraments before she passed to eternity.

Mrs. Mason was a native of Pennsylvania and had she lived here until next April she would have reached her seventieth year. At an early age she came to Mountain View with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Rock, pioneers of that community and now deceased. There she met and married James G. Mason. Shortly after marriage the young couple came to Menlo Park to reside and this was a little over 41 years ago. They were married in 1878, the following year coming to Menlo Park to reside, and they have lived here continuously ever since. For 18 years Mr. Mason was employed by the late firm of Duff & Doyle.

Four children were born to the couple, two of them dying in their infancy. Miss Bessie Mason and Miss Agnes, together with the heartbroken husband, survive.

The funeral obsequies at the Church of the Nativity were largely attended by friends and relatives from all parts of the state. The solemn requiem mass was sung by Father J. J. Doran of St. Patrick's Seminary, a dear friend of the deceased from boyhood. Other priests participating in the mass were Father Arynhae, president of St. Patrick's Seminary, Father Kunkel and Father Arbez of the same institution, Francis Rock, an advanced student of the institution and a nephew of the deceased, Father Hammond and Father Walsh. A special choir rendered music.

The following old time friends acted as pallbearers: J. B. Kelly, M. Polson, M. F. Duff, F. P. Roach, C. M. Weeden and John O'Brien.

There was a wealth of floral tributes banked about the coffin, among the beautiful pieces being a massive cross by the children of the grammar school, of which institution Mr. Mason has been a trustee for over 15 years and as a mark of respect for the deceased the flag on the school building was at half mast for three days.

Among those who came from different parts of the state to attend the funeral were Mrs. Joseph Flinn, of Berkeley; Miss Ella Canning, Mrs. George Morelock, Miss Frances Casey, Miss Mae Casey, Mrs. James O'Kane, Mrs. Charles Brady, Mrs. Annie Ahlert, Mr. and Mrs. James Molony, all of San Francisco; Mary A. Owen, Saratoga; Mrs. Alfred Mason, Santa Cruz; Mrs. Gripenstraw, Seabright; Mrs. Frank Summers, San Jose; Mr. and Mrs. James F. Rock, San Francisco.

The family received many letters of condolence from friends throughout the state.

A large cortege of friends and relatives followed the remains of the good woman to Holy Cross cemetery, where the body was laid away alongside those of her departed children, there to await the dawn of an eternal morn.

A paper is about to be started at the base hospital for the edification of the inmates by two overseas soldiers. All events of interest are to be published once a week. It is the general rumor at the hospital that the institution is to be the largest in the United States and hat in course of time 10,000 invalid soldiers will be taken care of here. The government is contemplating buying more adjoining lands.

Emmet Fay, whose boyhood was spent in Menlo Park, visited friends here this week after an absence of 15 years. He served through the late war, participating in several battles in France. His mother was formerly Miss Kate Bradley, who left here over 20 years ago.

Mrs. J. B. Leonard and children were here on Saturday visiting with friends. Edward Lawler Feeley and Miss Laura A. Call were united in marriage at San Jose on Monday last. The halls were beautifully decorated in greens and flowers and red hearts. During the evening dancing was in order, after which all enjoyed a Spanish supper served by an energetic committee. The tables were lovely in the valentine decorations. At each place were small red baskets filled with heart shaped sweets that were served as favors. After supper speeches were in order and the following responded: M. F. Kavanaugh, George Murray, Mrs. C. Doyle, Mrs. P. Perry, Mrs. G. Bowles and J. Alexander. Phil Blanchard, a noted singer, rendered several selections; also Frances Maloney, Joe Morey and Lorene and Rita Schenkel. A five piece orchestra furnished the music during the evening. These enjoyable parties are to be held once a month by both parlors.

MCGRATH CASE SUBMITTED

The case of Selma McGrath vs. John McGrath et al. was tried before Judge Buck last Tuesday without a jury. The testimony showed that the McGraths were pioneers of San Francisco and later in life they moved to Los Gatos and engaged in the hotel business. They had no children and it would appear that there was considerable domestic trouble over the accumulated property. During the year 1917 they mutually agreed to divide their property. Mrs. McGrath taking the hotel property and the husband the ranch. After the division of the property Mr. McGrath then went to live off on and with his brother, John McGrath, of San Mateo, and was to a considerable extent cared for by the McGrath family. Upon approaching death he gave his money derived from the sale of the ranch to his brother. The wife sues to recover this money on the ground that he was of unsound mind at the time he made the gift to his brother. On this point several well known residents of Los Gatos testified and a number of well known residents of San Mateo county who had known the deceased for many years also testified. Jenkins & Schlesinger appeared for the plaintiff and Jas. T. O'Keefe and W. G. Harding appeared for the defendants.

Mrs. Torres filed a petition yesterday in the superior court for letters of administration upon the estate of Edward Oorlo, her deceased son, who died last June in this city. At that time he was a sergeant in the United States army. The estate consists of accumulated compensation from the government. Jas. T. O'Keefe represents the petitioner.

THE PERFECT VALENTING

—A VICTOR RECORD

The most graceful gift of the season—one that will be played and remembered—the gift that will hold longest of all gifts the fascination of wondering who sent it, is a Victor Record. An appropriate tune or wording, something that recalls a memorable dance or a never-to-be-forgotten evening, yields just enough suggestion of the sender, without actually telling "who's who."

Think which of your friends will remember you by some strain of music you may have known together. Send them Victor Record Valentines! Whether or not, they guess right, they will appreciate the gift.

We have all the best and newest Victor Records, as well as Victorolas in all styles. A phone or mail order will receive our prompt attention.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

The Ford car can well be called the "peoples car," because there are more than 3,000,000 of them in daily operation. That is about four to one of the nearest follower in the motor car industry. This would not be so if the Ford car had not for sixteen years proven its superiority in service, in durability, and in the low cost for operation and maintenance; this would not be so if the Ford car was not so easy to understand, so simple in construction that anybody and everybody can safely drive it. Let us have your order for one now to avoid delay in delivery.
